

David Dembroski

David practises in all areas of entertainment law including music, television, theatre, publishing and interactive media.

His clients consist of well-known recording artists, record companies, producers of dramatic and reality programs, writers, directors, theatrical producers and music and book publishers. He has helped a number of his clients expand into complementary businesses such as celebrity endorsements and merchandising.

David's practice also includes sports law where he advises individuals and companies on sports-related matters such as advertising and promotions, merchandising and licensing, broadcast rights, franchise operations, intellectual property, player contracts and ticket matters, among others.

David was a partner at the law firm of Aird & Berlis LLP, where he practised for nine years.
